

1

This example demonstrates how an additional file with meta information about the print output document can be written in addition to the print output document.

In this case, a PDF output document is generated, and additionally a text document with information about the PDF content. The text file contains information about the records (in this case pages from and to per address from the data file and information about the start page of each named page usage per record.)

2

3

1

2

3

1

2

3

1

This example demonstrates how an additional file with meta information about the print output document can be written in addition to the print output document.

In this case, a PDF output document is generated, and additionally a text document with information about the PDF content. The text file contains information about the records (in this case pages from and to per address from the data file and information about the start page of each named page usage per record.)

2

3

1

2

3

1

2

3

1

This example demonstrates how an additional file with meta information about the print output document can be written in addition to the print output document.

In this case, a PDF output document is generated, and additionally a text document with information about the PDF content. The text file contains information about the records (in this case pages from and to per address from the data file and information about the start page of each named page usage per record.)

2

3

1

2

3

1

2

3